

WE ARE THE MULTIPLIER

What separates a strong student from an admitted one is the work.

For more than two decades we have taken on a deliberately small number of families each year and guided them through the most selective admissions landscape in the world. What follows is the record.

500⁺

Ivy League acceptance letters earned by our students

2,500⁺

Students guided to a Top 20 university

22

Years of practice, one limited cohort at a time

We do not promise outcomes. We build the kind of applicant these institutions choose, and we have done it long enough to know exactly what that takes.

Talent is the baseline. Decisions are the multiplier.

The schools on the cover admit as few as one applicant in twenty-five, and most of the students they refuse are strong. What decides is how that strength is surfaced, positioned, told, and timed. Four levers, each one multiplying the ones before it.

A strong student, alone

Real grades and real scores, presented the way ten thousand others present theirs.

THE STARTING POINT

× Strengths, made visible

We find what is genuinely rare in the student and make it impossible to miss.

SEEN, NOT SKIMMED

× A profile, positioned

The same record, aimed at the schools and programs where it reads strongest.

COMPETING WHERE THEY WIN

× A narrative that stays

One story ties it all together. Officers forget lists. They remember a person.

REMEMBERED IN THE ROOM

× The right decisions, on time

Where to apply, when, what to lead with, what to drop. Twenty-two years matter most here.

THE APPLICANT WE SUBMIT

Each layer multiplies the one before it, and one wrong call gives the multiplier back.

Strengths × Positioning × Narrative × Decisions = the Multiplier

TESTED ACROSS 2,500+ STUDENTS PLACED AT TOP 20 UNIVERSITIES

Above all: the decisions.

A season holds a handful of choices that outweigh months of effort. Most families face each one for the first time. We have faced them more than 2,500 times.

Which schools, and how many?

A list built to stretch without gambling, with every reach chosen where the student genuinely competes.

When to apply?

Early rounds multiply the odds at the right school and waste them at the wrong one. We call it school by school.

Which program to name?

The major and program you name decide who reads your file, and how crowded that door is.

Which strength leads?

Every student has several good angles and one best one. Leading with the wrong one buries it.

Which story to tell?

Of the five essays a student could write, one earns the acceptance. We recognize it before the writing starts.

What to walk away from?

The activity, class, or school that costs more than it returns. It is the hardest call families make alone.

Families bring the talent. We bring the twenty-two years that know what to do with it.

We do not believe in templates.

Every plan begins with the student in front of us. What we build from there rests on four commitments that have not changed in twenty-two years, and that our families tend to remember long after the acceptance arrives.

01

Strategy and positioning

We begin by finding the version of a student the most selective schools are actually looking for, then we aim higher than most families believe is realistic. The first target is a starting point.

02

A narrative worth admitting

Strong scores open the door. A clear and singular story is what an admissions officer remembers afterward. We help each student find the one thread that ties their work, their interests, and their ambition together.

03

A roadmap, not a guess

From the first meeting, every month carries a purpose. Students always know what comes next and why it matters, so the process never depends on last-minute scrambling or luck.

04

Standards that pull you higher

We hold the student to a higher standard than they hold themselves, and we stay close enough to make certain they reach it. The expectation is weekly, not occasional.

THE ARC OF AN ENGAGEMENT

FIRST, WE LISTEN

Discovery

We map the student in full: strengths, gaps, ambitions, and the honest distance to the goal.

THEN WE AIM

Strategy

A positioning plan and a school list calibrated to stretch the student, never to settle.

MONTH BY MONTH

The Build

Essays, activities, and narrative refined over time until every piece is deliberate.

TO THE END

Advocacy

We ready the student to submit with confidence and stand behind the application through decisions.

The result is a truer application, and the officers reading them can tell the difference.

Every family plays this game once. We play it every year.

Admissions rewards experience, and most families walk in with none. The season looks completely different when the people beside you have run it twenty-two times.

ON YOUR OWN		WITH ADMISSIONS PARTNERS
THE LIST	Built from rankings, forums, and guesswork.	Calibrated against 2,500+ students we have placed. Ambitious where it counts, safe where it must be.
THE TIMELINE	A junior-year scramble that starts too late.	A month-by-month roadmap that starts years ahead of the deadline.
THE ESSAYS	Rewritten in circles the week they are due.	The right story chosen early and refined until an officer remembers it.
THE DECISIONS	Made once, on hearsay, under pressure.	Called by a team that has faced each one more than 2,500 times.
THE APPLICATION	Hoping a strong file speaks for itself.	Built so it cannot be overlooked.

Four years of work. Eight minutes on the desk.

Most families never hear how short the first read really is. Everything we build is built for it.

8

MINUTES, ON AVERAGE

Four years of grades, scores, activities, and essays, weighed in about the time it took to read this page. The officer is not looking for everything. They are looking for one clear reason to say yes, and our job is to make that reason impossible to miss.

MINUTE ONE

The opening has to land

A working impression forms almost immediately. We decide what the officer sees first, so the strongest fact opens the file.

MINUTE FOUR

The story has to hold

Halfway through, a scattered file falls apart. One narrative keeps every activity, essay, and grade pulling in the same direction.

MINUTE EIGHT

The yes has to be easy

The read ends in a one-line recommendation. We build the file that makes that line effortless to write.

The first conversation costs nothing.

01

Bring the student

The record, the ambitions, and the honest questions you have been carrying.

02

Get the honest read

Where the student stands today, what is genuinely possible, and which decisions would change the odds.

03

Decide with clarity

No pressure and no obligation. We will tell you plainly whether we believe we can multiply this student's chances.

The proof is in who they became.

The universities on the first page admit as few as one applicant in twenty-five. Odds like that are not beaten by accident. They are the product of the work described on the page before, and these are a few of the students who lived it.

“

I thought I was already giving my best, until they showed me what my best could actually be. They pushed me further than I ever would have pushed myself, and the University of Chicago is where that landed me.

Ethan C.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

“

Yale was the school I was almost afraid to name out loud. They were the first to treat it as a real plan rather than a long shot, and they never once let me talk myself out of it.

Daniel Y.

YALE UNIVERSITY
DUKE LAW SCHOOL

“

What I needed was a roadmap, and that is exactly what they built. Every month I knew what came next and why it mattered, so none of it was ever left to chance.

Vivian G.

JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY

“

Some of those conversations I still replay years later. They did not just sharpen my application, they convinced me I belonged. That belief carried me from Columbia to Harvard Law.

Sean C.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY
HARVARD LAW SCHOOL

“

I walked in aiming for UCLA and they saw further than I did. They pointed me toward Penn's M&T program, a place I never imagined was within reach, then helped me earn my way in.

Jai A.

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA
Jerome Fisher M&T Program

“

I always kept my art and my science in separate boxes. They helped me bring them into one story, and that was the version of me Princeton said yes to.

Kacy C.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY

We are the multiplier.

A limited number of families join us each year. If yours is considering the road ahead, we would welcome a conversation about what is genuinely possible.

Counts are cumulative across twenty-two years and span all service tiers. The Ivy League figure counts acceptance letters, not individual students. The Top 20 figure counts individual students guided to a Top 20 university. Admit rates shown reflect each institution's most recent publicly available cycle, and several highly selective schools no longer publish complete data. The multiplier chart illustrates how the four levers compound. It is not a measured statistic, and no outcome is ever guaranteed. First-read times reported by admissions offices at highly selective universities commonly range from about five to ten minutes per application. Featured students appear with their consent.
